How am I doing in my job? I need a performance review

* A "performance review" is when your boss grades the quality of your work.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Celine: So, Peter, how are you feeling about your job so far?
Peter: Well, it's incredibly challenging but quite satisfying at the same time.
Celine: That's good to hear. If there is anything I can do, don't hesitate to ask.
Peter: In fact, I'm quite anxious about my upcoming performance review. Do you have any advice for me?
Celine: Sure. What area would you like advice on exactly?
Peter: Am I prompt for work every day?
Celine: You sure are. Can I suggest you set an alarm on your phone?
Peter: Yeah, that's a great idea. Am I productive every day and meeting all the goals?
Celine: Absolutely. What are you really concerned about?
Peter: Well, their questions are always a bit nerve-wracking.
Celine: Relax, and just focus on your job.
Peter: Thanks. I appreciate your input.

Learning Points

Responding to Suggestions

It's important to respond to suggestions others make. We can politely express that we like the idea or not.

Look at the chart below.

Accepting a Suggesting	Declining a Suggestion
Yeah, that sounds great. Thank you.	I don't think so, but thanks anyway.
That's a great idea. Thanks.	I don't know if that's a good idea. Thanks anyway.
I like that. Thanks.	I'm not sure that would work. Thanks anyway.

Examples:

- Alan: Why don't we ask John to come to the meeting?
- Annette: Hey, that's a great idea.
- Alan: Could we maybe hang that chart on the back of the door?
- Annette: Oh, I'm not sure that would work.

Asking for Targeted Clarifications

We ask for targeted clarification when we are not sure what the other person is talking about exactly. We then ask him/her to provide more information.

Examples:

- Which one are you referring to?
- Could you tell me more about ... ?
- Can you be more specific?
- Can you explain that?
- What exactly do you mean by ...?
- What are you really concerned about?
